Untold: Exploring Asian American Experiences

Asian American Health Initiative
Montgomery County, Maryland
Department of Health and Human Services
"Untold: Exploring Asian American Experiences" is a thoughtfully curated collection of resources designed to enhance understanding of the diverse Asian American experiences. While it may not cover every single aspect, it offers a range of pathways to delve deeper into the experiences, struggles, and triumphs that encompass the Asian American identity.

The term “Untold” emphasizes the need to shed light on stories that long remained underrepresented. The “Untold” stories within this resource collection refer to those narratives that have been overshadowed by stereotypes, misconceptions, and historical gaps, leaving a significant portion of the Asian American experience untold or unnoticed.

Within these pages, you'll encounter various avenues for exploration, including museums, scholarly articles, impactful movies, and insights into how Asian Americans are portrayed in contemporary media.

AAHI acknowledges that this collection isn't meant to fully capture the essence of what it means to be Asian American – a multifaceted, fluid, and ever-evolving experience shaped by factors like cultural heritage, history, and individual narratives. Instead, its purpose is to provide you with valuable resources, inviting you to begin a journey of discovery and understanding within the richness and diversity of Asian American culture.

This collection is for the youth struggling with their Asian American identity, for older adults wanting to learn more about mental health, for mental health professionals wanting to provide culturally responsive care, and for the Asian American community looking to explore, celebrate, and share their multifaceted experiences.

Definition Please (2020)

1 hr 31 mins

Definition Please is a family drama that follows the story of Monica Chowdry, a former national spelling bee champion who returns home to care for her sick mother. This film showcases the cultural nuances of being Indian American through traditions and explores the complexities of family relationships, the pressures of cultural expectations, and the challenges of finding one’s place in the world. It also explores themes of mental health concerns, specifically bipolar disorder.

The Namesake (2007)

2 hr 22 mins

This film is adapted from the novel The Namesake by Jhumpa Lahiri. While the film does not explicitly center around mental health, The Namesake is a great movie that explores immigration, acculturation strategies, and identity crises. These are all common experiences that many Asian Americans can relate to. Self-conscious differentiation may lead to mental health struggles. This film has the potential to immerse professionals in such an experience, enabling them to develop a deeper understanding of their clients.
Everything Everywhere All At Once (2022)

2 hr 19 mins

The movie is a great resource for understanding immigrant experiences and the parent-child relationship. It shows the immigrant experience of living a new life and tackles mental health concepts such as acculturation stress, intergenerational stress, and language barriers. Everything Everywhere All At Once is an emotional roller coaster that poetically and artistically displays the strained relationships in Asian families due to the feelings of being stuck between different cultures.

The Farewell (2019)

1 hr 40 mins

The Farewell is a 2019 film directed by Lulu Wang that tells the story of a Chinese American woman named Billi (played by Awkwafina) who travels to China with her family to visit her grandmother, who has received a diagnosis of terminal cancer. The film is a powerful and poignant exploration of cultural differences, family relationships, and the complexities of the immigrant experience. From an Asian American mental health perspective, it offers important insights into the ways that culture, history, and trauma impact mental health and well-being, and highlights the importance of support systems and connections in maintaining resilience and coping with life’s challenges.
Minari (2020)

1 hr 55 mins

Although the movie does not tackle mental health directly, it provides insight into the immigrant experience of chasing the American dream and becoming successful. It touches on some aspects and psychological theories that may have an impact on Asian American mental health such as masculine norms and depressive symptoms in Asian men, the family strength theory, and acculturation.
